WHY

"Music of the Plants"

"The earth has music for those who listen"
- William Shakespear -

Plants have survived and evolved on earth for millions of years longer than the human species and comprise more than 82% of the biomass of all life on earth, making plants the dominant life-form on earth.

It is also not surprising that plants are much more 'sensitive' to their environment than humans, and besides the five main senses that humans have (but evolved in a "plant" way), plants have at least 15 more.

However, humans in general regard plants as mute, immobile, unintelligent ("vegetative"), rather insensitive, yet, useful resources for human consumption and other commercial activities. How totally wrong we are!

The fast paced, commercialised human lifestyle causes most humans to not even notice plants. Due to this total "plant blindness", we fail to perceive the reality and absolute brilliance of the plant-life around us.

The fact that plants are sentient organisms that can communicate, have a social life, and are intelligent living beings that can adapt, solve problems, and so much more, has been denied by humans for centuries – mainly due to cultural prejudices and influences.

From a plant's perspective, we are probably just speedy, heedless, and very arrogant co-inhabitants of this planet.

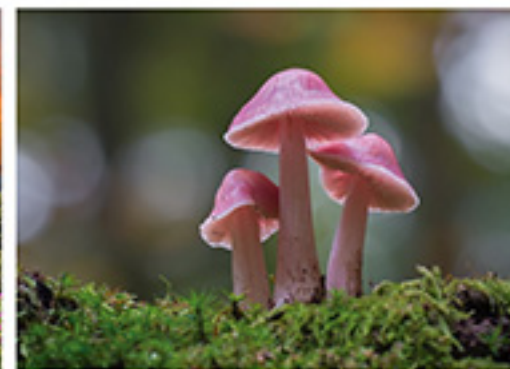

"Nature is not mute - it is man who is deaf"
- Terence McKenna -

Plants can not only perceive sound but can also produce sound, and with the aid of biodata sonification, bioelectrical plant responses or signals can be amplified, filtered and translated into sound and music.

Experiencing the "Music of the Plants", is one of the best ways to alter the general human "plant blindness" and guide our attention back to them and to perceive plants finally as the fascinating living beings that they are, and to whom we all are inseparably linked with.

We are grateful to now be able to offer a presentation, live demonstration and inter-active experience of the 'Music of the Plants' as a separate presentation or included in other LESELI Experiences or Events.

One of the main reasons why the human-animal feels disconnected, isolated, and lost in a seemingly hostile world, is to a large extent the result of us severing our connection with nature, hence, spirit and all other living creatures, including ourselves.

This connection serves as our internal guidance system and without it, we are lost in many ways.

To truly UNDERSTAND our universe, our planet, our environment with its amazing biodiversity, and our own inseparable connection and inter-relationships with it all – we need holistic information, knowledge, and a receptive mind. Only then will we be able to make sense of it all and embrace the true being that we really are.
